proposed pact, which boosts the basic wage from $1.20½ an hour to $1.29½, plus differential raises of 1 to 9 cents an hour, will be voted on immediately by the union membership. They called a meeting of Victoria Local 1-118 for 8 Monday at 715 Johnson to discuss the proposal.

The negotiators reached agree ment after a three-day conference in Vancouver.

DATE FROM JAN. 1

A joint statement issued by the union and Forest Industrial Relations Ltd., representing the employers, said the wage boosts will be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1951. The proposed new contract will run until June 14, 1952.

The cost-of-living bonus claus ould be effective July 1 of this year and Jan. 1, 1952. It provides for 1 cent an hour for each 1.3 point rise in the cost-of-living index above 172.5, the Jan. 1, 1951, level.

The woodworkers originally requested an increase of 12½ cents an hour.

GRADUATED BOOSTS

CATS WITH WINGS

THERE WAS A TIME when pink elephants were looked upon as peculiar phenomena which presented themselves to those who were—shall we say?—suffering from temporary mental aberration. But the advent of pink elephants is no longer a nine days' wonder, for they have long been super-seded in news value, at least, by even odder animals.

In certain English newspapers, for instance, there has recently been a series of letters telling of cats with wings that seem to have appeared all over the country at different times; not recently, it is true, but with documentary and photographic evidence to support their claim to wings.

SEEN IN SPAIN

IT WAS A NEWS ITEM to the effect that winged cats have been seen in Spain which started up the letter barrage, mebody immediately dug up a story from Somerset to show that 50 years ago a lady from that county possessed a cat with wings "covered with fur, but obviously too small and weak for flight."

Spurred on by that, a Sheffield correspondent sent in snapshots of a Yorkshire cat that, in 1945, possessed four such wings, two of them three inches long and the other pair seven inches. Not to be outdone, another Sheffield resident recalled a cat, about 1939—but unphotographed—that not only had wings 10 inches long, but grew new wings every six or

CHESTERFIELD VARIETY

THEN ALONG CAME a resident of Chesterfield to claim that her tomcat, which died a few months ago, had "long sinewy wings that enabled it to jump from tremendous heights." Apparently none of the winged variety actually flew, but their appendages enabled them to bounce around with astonishing leaps and bounds—far outdistancing the antics of the ordinary cat.

Never having had a cat with wings the idea seems a bit repellent. But such a competition among winged-cat owners is at least a diversion from the more serious news that fill the papers these days. So perhaps it can be looked upon as a form of escapism that draws the reader's attention away from the gloomy international situation and the seemingly winged leaps of living costs.

SEA-SERPENTS AGAIN

THE SEA-SERPENT controversy may belong in the same I class for, do what I may, it keeps popping up at me. Among more recent communications on the subject, I have received an old but interesting book from a woman reader. It is Gosse's "Romance of Natural History"—and no less than 64 of its close-printed pages is given over to the sea-serpent.

Entitled "The Great Unknown," the chapter records all the material and data supplied by English witnesses who attested to seeing a creature disporting itself in different waters all over the world. Incidentally, the author-an Englishmanignores the testimony of Norwegian eye-witnesses who alleg-edly saw the beastie off Massachusetts in 1817, and French and American seafarers who supposedly saw it later.

NOVA SCOTIA STORY

· A MONG THESE "witnesses of known character and posi-A tion" were five British officers who saw it off Halifax, N.S., in 1833; Capt. M'Quhae, who saw it from the Daedalus in 1848; Capt. Beechey of the Blossom; Mr. Morries Stirling, who saw it in a Norwegian fiord; Mr. Davidson, who watched it from the Royal Saxon in 1829; Capt. Steele of the Barham, in 1852, and Capt. Harrington and officers of the Castillan,

What intrigued me about the whole thing was the variation in their descriptions; but the horse's head and long neck were among them. The author, a well-known naturalist of his day, hinted that the sea-serpent might be associated with "beings considered to be lost in obsolete antiquity"— whatever that may mean. So I don't know whether this proves that Caddy Nessie-Ogopogo is a centenarian-plus or what. But it looks as if we shall always have it with us.

Epidemic Of Mild Flu Now Past Peak

No Proof Yet Virus Same Deadly Type That Killed 8,000 Britons

By CANADIAN PRESS

Legislators, soldiers, miners, hockey players and trainmen awe been added to the lists of Canadians stricken by influenza, but medical authorities believe the disease has passed its peak in most communities.

Virologists have not yet definitely determined that the Canadlan influenza is caused by the same lethal virus that killed Montreal Friday night re-

Employees At Arena Secure Wage Boosts

Substantial pay increases have been won by engineers and main-tenance men at Victoria's Menorial Arena.

Ed Callan, business representaive for local 918, International Operating Engineers' Union, an-nounced today signing of a new agreement with the Arena Comission covering eight arena workmen.

Under terms of the agreement the building supervisor will receive a wage increase of $25 per Lord and Lady Wakehurst will month. The chief engineer will receive a raise of 12½ cents an hour, engineer operators 6 cents night by Mr. Gray, and Works Minister E. C. Carson, provincial an hour and maintenance men 5

Montreal Friday night re-ported 23 more deaths among elderly persons caused by the making a total of 115 for that city. In St. Catharines, Ont. two deaths Friday were attributed to the malady.

A seven-month-old today in Burlington, Ont., apparently from a combination of flu and measles.

Dr. J. E. Gimby, medical health officer at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., said the number of flu cases there has increased sharply in the last two days. It was not a serious type but "will spread like wildfire if precautions aren't taken to check it." He said visiting in Sault hospitals should be restricted to patients' relatives.

Sessions of the Ontario Legislature were curtailed through the absence of two cabinet mem-bers—Labor Minister Daley and Welfare Minister Goodfellow her comparative immunity, only nine cases having been reported, although five deaths this year are attributed to flu. Borden, Ont., are in hospital with flu, and a Canadian Na-tional Railways spokesman said The agreement also provides for union security with a maintenance of membership clause.

Stalin's Words Meant Little, Press Thinks

LONDON (CP) - The nor Communist press in Britain and on the continent generally treated Prime Minister Stalin's blast Prime against the United Nations and the Western democracies as an abusive outburst that did not say much.

Typical editorial comment:
The Conservative Yorkshire
Post: The rambling vituperative statement by the Soviet leader is and five other members were full of lying accusations against reported ill. Toronto continued the British Prime Minister and the American government, it is a piece of vulgar abuse design be broadcast as propaganda. Milan's independent Rightis Tempo: "Indulging in a polemic with Attlee, the Russian dictator would like to make us believe he is so much engaged in peace works to be unable to dedicate himself to rearmament." Rome's pro-government Il Mes-sagero speculated that "the firmness demonstrated by the democracies recently" may have caused the Stalin comment. Stockholm's Liberal Dagens Nyheter: "It is extremely striking that Stalin chose England as a tayred for his hitter attack The reason is not difficult to realliance between Great Britain and the United States, Russia now hopes to spoil collaboration between the two nations."

In France the Rightist Figaro said the statement is important, because "the master of the Kremlin is sparing of his words and when he is willing to break his silence, this cannot be considered as a meaningless gesture."

Parliament Rejects Conscription

THE CANADIAN PARLIAMENT THIS week voted overwhelmingly against scription, the Liberal, Conservative and C.C.F. Parties standing together against the Alberta splinter which calls itself the Social Credit Party. Parliament thus accepted, without regard to party lines, the advice of a Prime Minis-ter who is in himself a vivid symbol of the whole conscription issue.

Mr. St. Laurent's statement on this matter, which was condensed and per haps overlooked by many in the news dispatches, was perhaps the most impor-tant and self-revealing he has ever made. At the beginning of a debate which no doubt will be resumed in the future, Canadians should understand precisely where their leader stands. Mr. St. Laurent leaves no possible doubt on that score. He has faced with equal courage the conscriptionist forces of English. the conscriptionist forces of English-speaking Canada and the anti-conscrip-

A Canadian Prime Minister has seldom been as candid as Mr. St. Laurent when he admits at the beginning that his attitude has caused "some uneasiness to some good Canadians . because of my race, the part of Canada from which I come, my religious beliefs, and so forth. But I think I can assure them that they are quite mistaken, and that,' he adds, turning straight to Quebec, "is something those who are not my friends or supporters in my own native province ve long realized." He then read an article from the violently anti-conscriptionist Le Devoir, which attacked him for favoring con-scription in the last war and for having no objection now to conscription in principle. "Well," says Mr. St. Laurent, "I was not at all offended at the terms of that article." He thus agrees that he supported conscription before and has no objection to it in principle now.

The whole question with him, he says, is whether conscription is desirable and useful at the moment. It is not a matter to be decided on "sentimenal grounds"

but "on its merits and strictly on its merits." It is "not a matter of religion, nor a matter to be decided on the basis of religion, and I deprecate appeals of that kind . . . Let us be men and let us face realfties and do what we think will be the most efficient and the most effec tive as our contribution to the upbuilding of those international forces."

On this basis, Mr. St. Laurent finds no merit in conscription now. "On the contrary, the information we have obtained is that it would hamper what is being done at this moment." But this French Canadian statesman refuses to play politics in Quebec. Knowing the history and the feelings of his people, he gives them and other Canadians this clear warning:

"Now, this does not mean that the situation cannot change, and it does not mean that if and when it does change there will not be changes in the manner in which one changes in the manner in which one contract will be compared with the contract of the con in which our resources will be con-tributed. . . But those changes will not be recommended by this Government on any sentimental grounds, because of any appeals on a racial or religious basis but on their actual effective value to the joint strength of the combined forces of the North Atlantic Alliance."

All parties, save the Social Crediters have agreed with Mr. St. Laurent. His judgment is confirmed by virtually the entire Parliament and his sincerity as a Canadian, far above Quebec politics and Quebec prejudice, stands out unques-

The wisdom of his policy will be tested in actual experience and the policy is subject to change as this experience suggests. In the meantime Mr. St. Laurent has not only survived the first major test of his leadership but, on the conscription issue, has been given almost a unanimous vote of confidence such as no Prime Minister, in similar circumstances, has received before. The public being behind it, are taking on a new and large measurement in this country

Rough Facts And Smooth Talk

DR. JAMES B. ENDICOTT, THE equally indefatigable detractor of his country abroad, recently addressed an audience at the University of British Columbia. It is the duty of a university to provide all the knowledge possible for its students, and to this end the appearance of Dr. Endicott before the student body was a useful experience for the undergraduates. Youth should have an opportunity to see fallacy in action as well as truth.

That Dr. Endicott well performed his function may be gathered from some of his reported remarks. Among them is the assertion that, "The attack launched by South Korean forces on North Korea was deliberately planned by the Syngman Rhee Government with the aid and advice of the United States Military Experts Commission." Another excerpt: "For over a year before the war broke out over a year before the war broke out MacArthur was making plans for the invasion and policing of the country." Stories of huge Chinese army concentrations in Korea were branded "American falsehoods." Much was made of quotations from Syngman Rhee, who once urged invasion of North Korea as a means of defending the south (and who was quickly and sharply discredited by the United States).

affiliations much more openly than Dr. Endicott, who chooses the familiar role of a simple seeker after truth, unbiased, unprejudiced—and unlikely. However, that is his affair.

His effect on the university audience not recorded, except through an editorial in the student newspaper, The Ubyssey. This, somewhat surprisingly, Ubyssey. This, somewhat surprisingly, begins: "If any member of the Canadian Peace Assembly deserves a pat on the back from an anti-Communist source, that person is Dr. James Endicott . paper agrees that "few of us can help wondering whether world peace is the only important motive prompting Dr. Endicott to run around the globe . . ." and that "we are not willing to accept and that we are not willing to accept naively the supposition that Dr. Endicott is presenting the whole truth..." The editorial admits however, that he "puts up a formidable argument opposing the United States view . . ." and that "the man really believes what he says."

The conclusions to be drawn from this effect are obvious. Dr. Endicott, a smooth and fluent speaker, dressed up his very doubtful facts in a manner that impressed his young hearers, temporarily dulled their intellectual doubts, and left them with the feeling that they had been in the presence of a "world figure." It the United States).

Such talk, of course, is straight down the Moscow line. It is being peddled by men who show their Communist is an old dodge of platform orators to substitute eloquence for information. We are just a little disappointed that the Ubyssey editors fell for it.

Men At Work

A MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT FROM Calgary resigned the other day because the work at Ottawa threatened to kill him. In his farewell speech to the House of Commons he said he liked his job but 14 hours of labor a day had broken his health. It takes a strong man to survive in modern politics.

A member of Parliament gets $6,000 year, spends most of it to live in Ottawa for six months and actually has less left over than many skilled trades-men. And he has to work twice as hard as any other wage earner.

All morning he is busy with his correspondence, with committee meetings and the affairs of his constituency. All afternoon he listens to speeches or makes them in the House. The detailed work of legislation goes on all evening until 11 o'clock-and no overtime pay. Let anyone who thinks the life of the legislator is easy try this schedule for a single week. He will be glad to return to his office, his workshop or his farm and

To most Canadians Parliament is a few lines of type in the newspaper, reporting a dull debate. It would do us good sometimes to remember the oceans of argument that are never reported, the hours of work never observed and the low-paid men who do it, usually ending their lives broke.

The wonder is not that Parliament cannot attract better candidates but that it attracts any candidates at all. Next time you start to grumble about the state of politics ask yourself how much time you are giving to make them better.

Humanity And National Interest

ONE OF THE MOST NOTICEABLE shortages in Canada as this nation gears itself to defence production is manpower. When the full defence effort is under way, that short supply will be also many more properties. supply will be even more emphasized.
Under these conditions, the usual humanitarian impulse of Canadians to assist the rehabilitation of physically disabled persons is joined by the com-pelling national urgency of finding more people to do more work. That in turn focuses attention on the Nation Conference on Rehabilitation of Disabled Persons held recently. Statistics. show that there are in this country 142,000 physically handicapped individuals who, because of their handicaps, are unable to obtain employment. Many means have been advanced whereby they means have been advanced whereby they could be fitted into some productive capacity of incalculable value to themselves and to the country.

The time appears to be ripe to wed humanitarianism to national self-interest. Given the assistance they require, the training and the apportunity a large training and the opportunity, a large percentage of the 142,000 could do their part in Canada's defence effort. They would wish for nothing more.

Chips Off The Old Brock

SEE that houses (being so much less important than offices ... houses just have people in them instead of Big Shots) ... I see that houses are going to have only one mail delivery a day instead of two. This is going to save money, which is always a splendid plan and always a novel plan, too, coming from a government, of all things. But it would come better from the office, and come more gracefully, if that department were run as a public service and not as a moneymaker.

For some time no Ottawa has regarded Brock private correspondence as a taxable lux-ury. If you vant to write to your old grandmother, you are not permitted to do so at cost. Ah, no. Any man who can afford two cents to write to his damfool old granny can (presumably) afford four cents, and he is taxed accordingly. Or she is, if he gets an allowance from her. This is not the fault of your letter-carrier or your local postmaster. It is a matter of public policy, no less.

TROUBLESOME advertisments come into your granny's house at one cent each; upsetting her no little and creating desires in her that nature never meant her to have. Dodgers and other univerher to have. Dodgers and other universally circulated stuff can get into her house at half a cent each, I believe. If you can clutter the letter-carrier up enough, it is supposed to come out cheaper for somebody, if not for him. Though if I were a postmaster-general, I'd be tempted to charge one cent for its postmaster carries. real letters, two cents for silly postcards, three cents for mimeographed nonsense, and 50 cents for dodgers and other circulars. It would have a wonderful effect, and teach people to pause for a moment before stuffing letter boxes full of trash

Besides, letter writing is a form of art, and no mean one, either. I think the late Professor Raleigh placed letters something like third in the ranks of literature, right after wild lives and tame lives. Who in the world ever started a public policy of taxing literature? I don't think the culture commission would like to hear about that. Somebody, somewhere, is trying to make us unlettered, in every sense. It is a dirty plot, that's

IN a civilized country, if any such coun try still exists (which I very much doubt), your mail would reach you at breakfast. This would keep you from waiting round half the morning for the stuff. There would be other deliveries throughout the day, of course, and one in the evening also. When I lived in London I got only five deliveries a day, and this was something of a shock to a chap who'd had a delivery once an hour-in downtown New York. But it wasn't bad, at that. And all the nasty news seemed to turn up after dinner, when you can stand it far better. In fact, I suspected my London postman of being a clairvoyant who knew instinctively which letters were worst and kept them until the evening post. Bless his great big thoughtful heart.

YOU will point out, unerringly, that London and New York are bigger towns than anything Canada can boast. And how right you are. Let me be the first to congratulate you. But surely a postman's beat (or "walk," as he calls it) can be no bigger in London or New York than it is here. So that the size of the city doesn't affect the quality of the

You will also point out that the world is always getting better, by some mys-terious process known as Progress. And therefore whatever happens next is better than what happened last. Perhaps you are right, though I hope not. But it seems to me that we are sometimes less comfortable than we were before. No doubt we have to abandon certain comforts in these queer times. That is one thing. But it is quite another thing to say that a decent postal system is an obvious luxury, and our only luxury. By all means let us fire the poor postie if we have to. But let us fire him in company with other servants, and not

SUIT YOURSELF

THE OTHER day at a party my host began to discuss his gent's lounge suiting. Was it pride or embarrassment that prompted him? I know not which. Anyhow, he said his natty suit was four years old, believe it or not. We were supposed to say it looked new, and some of us did. I was too shy to tell him that the suit I was wearing was 12 years years old, and will have to serve many years yet before getting a pension. (The reason it lasts so well is that I alternate it with another that is 13 years old.) I fear I chose the material for durability and not charm. I also fear that while it's wearing well, it may easily look 40 years old rather than 12. It seems a Tory suit, a reactionary suit, an unprogressive suit. The Dean of Canterbury gressive suit. The Dean of Canterbury would (as a kind of theological zoot-

THIS suit reminds me of a Canadian who once visited a fashionable London tailor. When his suit wore out he wrote to London and had another made of the same stuff. Every few years he placed a fresh order, but didn't revisit England for a couple of generations. Finally he made a second trip, and dropped in on his tailor. Since his wife had told him that he must at all costs get a new cloth (just by way of variety every 50 years or so), he looked at every bolt on every shelf. But none pleased him. At last he saw a bolt he liked, up at the very top of a high shelf. "Pass that down," he told the tailor. But the tallor said, "Oh, you can't have that. We keep it for some idiot in Canada." "Down it comes," said the customer, "I'm the idiot himself."

And so re-luctantly home with Master George Gregory (he carrying under his arm the luncheon bones for his hunting dog) to ponder an amusing question put the gathering by Frederick Hinke: what several persons control this city? Unable to solve definitively this conundrum, did fall into fitful sleep, with such tossings quet unto my thighs. as did bring my night-dress like a tourni-

THURSDAY, 15TH - Strolling by Thunderbird Park in the moonlight, me-thought I observed in the assembled totem poles a wry caricature of several distinguished citizens, whom good manners prevents me identifying. Why gad, thought I, there stands the whole Legisature, stripped of all disguise. An un-worthy fancy, I dismissed it. But sure 'tis sad to think that these works of native art, which cannot be replaced, must moulder in the weather and soon be decayed and gone like the men who put them there. As I walked on, heavy-hearted, my spirits rose at the sight of a young man who had taken off his coat and shivered in shirtsleeves that his gar ment might warm his sweetheart. Sin Waiter Raleigh, thought I, still strolls these streets. My wife, poor wretch, home exhausted from the Valentine tea party to aid that excellent organization which fights the malady of arthritis. She vowed that Halcyon Carson, president of the club, was the most remarkable woman of the times who, conquering illness herself, doth struggle for the res cue of others and can encompass in one day another woman's labors for a month. Halcyon, methought, what a lovely name for such a creature of hap-piness and triumph.

FRIDAY, 16TH-Did leave my place of business to stroll in the streets, observing how the ladies do with divers small tricks of clothing herald the coming of Spring. Did meet Master John Hart, he the former Premier, brisk of step and jaunty despite his years, and doffing a trim black hat to acquaintances, whereat his fine white mane was disclosed. Master John Ruttan, from his law chambers, taking the air in Fort Street, did inform me that his brother Henry, he the navy surgeon, though younger ap pearing, is in truth the elder. There after, much derring do: tea with Master William Straith and his lovely wife; cock tails with Agnes Newton Keith, an in-trepid wench of immense talent, she shortly bound for Borneo, whence cometh with due dispatch a further record of her journeys. By carriage to Wellington Avenue, where I did pay my respects to Roy Thorsen, a noble fellow of quiet wit, and fine as hands can make him, who hath this day quit single life for union with a vivacious lass by name Doris Phillips. By and by, a leisurely ride through the park to the Symphony Ball. where many elegant ladies and their escorts disported themselves in stately minuets, the flowing petticoats of the women swirling prettily in the spacious hall. Did exchange snuff with Harold Henderson, he as fine as frog's hair, and regarded his winning wife as she led a clumsy oaf through a vexsome quadrille. Cocked a lorgnette at Master Chadwick a courtly officer with fine orange whis kers, but withal a dem'd Whig. The musicians played well, relentlessly driven through the Strauss by Master Tickle, yet I make bold to suggest my flage olette would have added a certain je ne sais quoi to this musick. Concluded that the most dashing couple of the ball were Master James and Mistress Trudi Munro, both richly browned by southern suns; she in stunning gown and bare shoulders, the wearing of which doth shew some spirit and trepidation, which in veriest truth she doth possess. So mighty merry home and to bed.

A Maltese immigrant to Canada, now employed by the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, has written a book in Maltese to tell the people of his homeland about this country. Mr. George Bonavia, who was a newspaper man in Malta, has entitled it: "Canada—Land of Hope and Opportunity." This is excellent advertising for Can-

It would be much more effective for peoples of other coun-tries to learn about Canada from an emigrant who has made a success here, than to read what a native Canadian would write about Canada. There would be no implication of propaganda.

Stalemate

By WALTER LIPPMANN, from Washington

GENERAL of the Army MacArthur's statement last Tuesday after his inspection of the west Korean battlefront bears out what Sen. Johnson of Texas said the same day to the Armed Services committee. There is no end now in sig to the fighting in Korea. "What future has in store," said Gen. MacArthur, 'continues to be largely national considerations and decisions not yet

The struggle has become a wa manoeuvre not cisely on the 38th kind of fighting stalemate in central Korea. Our present object cannot be to pacify the whole of Korea and unite it under an independent government. That would involve a mili tary effort which we are not prepared to make. Our present object is to render the Chinese intervention indecisive and costly. We are not now considering, so Gen. MacArthur tells us, carrying the war as a major operation on the ground into northern Korea. On the other hand, though Gen. MacArthur said nothing about the latest Communist offensive, it had already been launched when he spoke, and so we must assume that he and Lt. Gen. Ridgway are confident thatour hold on most of South Korea is

This indecisive struggle in central Korea is better, of course, than the forced withdrawal which last December so many thought was not unlikely. It can also have some compensations if it nips in the bud the myth of Chinese military invincibility, and if it persuades the Peiping government that wars outside of China—say in Southeast Asia—cannot be an easy triumph and would be in fact prolonged and indecisive.

REST HOPE

The very best that anyone can hope rout of all this in the near future is that once the existence of a stalemate has been demonstrated, .the light decrease in intensity until some how at long last a de facto cease-fire prevails. It is not likely in view of our relations with Chiang Kai-shek on Formosa, that a cease-fire in Korea could be "negotiated." It would be better now, I should suppose, not to court another failure, which might have to be vindicated by another gesture.

All this, which is implicit in our present conception of the Korean amounts to saying that we have put aside the political objectives declared in the U.N. resolution of Oct. 7—to establish by arms "a unified, independent and demo-cratic government of Korea." It amounts instead to a recognition that the military partition of Korea, which was agreed to in 1945, is after all the best that the great powers in their bitter rivalry can make of a bad job.

This dismal conclusion is not going to.

be the last word on the subject. Even-tually there will be a settlement of the Korean question by the nations which have an abiding interest in Korea. But that settlement cannot even be attempted now. The principal powers who must make such a settlement are, as the long history of Korea proves, Japan, China, and Russia the United Nations acting under the leadership of its Asian mem-bers, would provide some form of stewardship for Korea, as an alternative to the military partition, until the time comes when there can be a true settle-

There is nothing tangible whatever to go upon. But if only it were possible for Nehru and Liaquat to offer, besides the very good advice they have offered, to organize a stewardship for Korea which would permit the Chinese and the Americans to withdraw, there might be the first ray of light on the horizon of a new and better day.

(Matthew 5: 11).

We miss the true relationship of the earthly life of Jesus to us, and our relationship to Him, if we do not grasp and realize the fact of His true humanity. But it is likewise necessary to see how it was in that earthly life that His divinity was revealed. It is in living with Him, as the disciples lived with Him, that we, too, shall feel the power and served in many pastorates in (Matthew 5: 11). glory of the Christ.

The annual congregation ban Jesus, as well as the divine Lord.
We can so live in the Gospels, walking with Jesus and the disciples along the seashore, on the ountain, among the multitudes, mountain, among the intuitives, in flowery fields and quiet places, among His friends.

We can have His comforting presence in homes of doubtful, questioning Pharisees; with other questioners who came by night, in the tragic scenes leading o the Cross and the triumphant experiences of the Resurrection.

In such a way can the wonder ul life and the wonderful story become as real to us, and en grossing than the incidents and nvironment of daily life.

That the noblest Christian have so known Jesus and lived with Him is evident in many life histories. The imitation Christ, the following of the example of the Master, has given many an example of love and service in which humanity has attained its greatest height.

In contrast to that glory of Christian living is the denial of od in the mass of evil, hatred and violence in the world.

If men everywhere had the knowledge of God, if they knew the Gospels, and the Jesus Christ of the Gospels, the greatest hope of a better world would be realized. Yet how few think of the Gospel as the greatest weapon of hope and security!

Regardless of what you do to stop or shorten a cold, authorities will tell you that this is sound

FEEL BETTER FAST

And it's advice you can follow with complete confidence. For ASPIRIN is the medication used by millions of men and women to treat these distressing symptoms. One reason ASPIRIN provides the amazingly fast relief you want is that it actually goes to work in two seconds to make you feel better, fast.

You can see this two-second speed with your own eyes by dropping an ASPIRIN tablet in a glass of water and watching how fast it disintegrates.

WHAT TO DO FOR SORE THROAT

Gargling with three ASPIRIN tablets dissolved in one-third of a glass of water will bring you remarkably quick relief from sore throats due to colds. Using ASPIRIN this way makes a highly potent medicinal gargle that almost instantly soothes tender throat membranes, relieves pain and irritation.

VIEWS OF SPORT PROBED BY FIGHT RESULT

NEW YORK-The United States Olympic Committee, which can be as obstinate as the common cold and as weak-willed as a man with a maid, has been eased out of an awkward situation by Don Gehrmann, the well-known lingerie mannequin. Foolishly yielding to pressure from misguided sources, the committee relaxed its own rules and sent a special invitation to Gehrmann to run for the United States in the Pan-American Games in Buenos Aires, for which he did not qualify. Because he is a bridegroom who must win bread as well as races, Gehrmann has declined.

Ever so long ago it was provided that the National Amateur Athletic Union championships should serve as the final tryouts for membership in the track and field team for the hemispheric Olympics, starting Feb. 25. Due notice to that effect was given, but for reasons of his own, Gehrmann did not compete.

He was, accordingly, automatically and properly left off the team. Being cognizant of the rules, Gehrmann himself made no holler, but recently the discovery that America's fastest miler was not on the team brought howls from assorted inmates of the press box.

A Likely Target

Chances are it was not so much a determination that justice be done to Gehrmann or a desire that the United States have the strongest possible representation which stirred the editorial wrath. More likely, the authors merely saw and seized an opportunity to fling-the 16-pound invective at their favorite targets, the round, hard heads of the track and field authorities.

That's fair enough. It is not by accident that the chairborne brass of the A.A.U. and the Olympic Committee became the favorite whipping boys of the sporting press. They earned the distinction nonestly by exercising and refining a talent for making unpopular decisions with the stuffiest possible complacency and bucking public opinion with the acme of stiff-necked pomposity.

Naturally, therefore, the boys cried havoc when the Pan-American squad list was published without Gehrmann's name. What idiocy was this? How could a squad be considered representative of the United States if it did not include the season's most celebrated performer, a man who had proved his class by whipping all comers in 38 consecutive races? Suppose Gehrmann hadn't observed the formality of qualifying he was still the best, wasn't he? Then make room for him.

The Democratic Way

These were good arguments, lacking nothing but fairness and ood sense. Harkening to them, the authorities gave in and invited Gehrmann, but he said no thanks, he didn't have a stitch to wear and couldn't possibly get ready in time.

He should not have been invited. Not because he had committed any offence demanding discipline, but because the established method of selecting the team is a form of democracy-inaction, which excludes special privilege.

The rules established a trip to Buenos Aires as a prize for a specific achievement-fininshing one, two, three in the national championships. Thus an opportunity was made open to every kid prepared to take his chances. He might be a miler who couldn't beat Gehrmann once in 38 attempts. But on the 39th try he might get lucky; maybe Gehrmann would have an off day, or maybe Gehrmann wouldn't even show up. The kid who accepts the epportunity is entitled to his chance.

Lots of kids have brought off such a chance, too, slim though It seems. In 1948 Harrison Dillard was acknowledged the finest hurdler of all time, undefeated in an endless succession of races. Yet in the final tryout for the Olympic team, he tripped over a hurdle and failed to qualify, although he did make the grade as a sprinter and won the dash championship at the Olympic Games.

It Could Happen To Sugar Ray

To permit him to qualify as a hurdler on his record would have been to deprive somebody else of a trip to London, which had been justly earned.

Similarly, Charley Beetham and Bill Bonthron, the top men in their fields, muffed their Olympic trials in 1936.

In 1948 Gil Dodds was our best miler, but a damaged Achilles tendon prevented him from competing in the Olympic trials. Again the demand was heard that the rules be relaxed, the rights of a legitimate qualifier ignored, and Dodds be sent to London. time the authorities held out properly, and wisely, too, because Gil wouldn't have been physically able to score in London. On his record, Sugar Robinson qualifies as the middleweight champion of the world. He has beaten Jake LaMotta, the champion. But if Robinson should ever lose to LaMotta, he will not be the middleweight champion. Like Gehrmann, he must qualify be the finance of the

As Young Kayoed

NEW YORK (UP)-Representatives of the District Attorney's office and the New York State Athletic Commission were preparing reports today on the strange technical knockout suffered by middle-weight Paddy Young at Madiweight raddy foung at Madi-sn Square Garden. Young, 22, lost at 2.57 of the second round-last night to Eugene (Silent) Hairston, a 21-year-old negro deaf mute. Both are New Referee Ruby Goldstein, exlightweight contender who now is New York's No. 1 ring official, stopped the bout when Young was on the canvas for the fifth time. There were two knocklowns in the first round and hree in the second.

When Young was floored the fourth time, Goldstein asked: "What are you trying to do here, quit on me? Are you trying to throw the fight?"

Young answered: "Wottinell you think I'm doing down here? I'm hurt.

When Young was floored again, Goldstein stopped the bout in accordance with the New York State rule that requires a con-test to be ended when a fighter has been floored three times in one round of a non-title bout.

Young was questioned after the fight to find out whether there was any connection between his knockout and the sur prising jump of betting odds, favoring Hairston, from 13-5 to 17-5 within one hour before the Hairston is now unbeaten in 13 straight matches, although held to a draw in one.

About Symphony

For its size and population Victoria may yet become the most musically inclined city in Canada if the attendance at the Student Symphony Concerts at the Royal Theatre is an indica tion of the young people's taste.

Since the inception of these musicals for young people the attendance has gone up by leaps and bounds, J. F. K. English, senior municipal school inspector, reported today. At the next concert on Feb. 25, between 700 and 800 high school students are expected to hear a light symphony program under the leader ship of Conductor Hans Gruber.

The selection of "Mines" and "Bride" makes it appear that the academy is paying heed to the popularity of films, as some of its critics have urged. But others argue that there are plenty of popularity polls and that the academy should return to its original purpose .

Wife Down The Well

An author and his wife drove alone to look at an abandoned farm they were interested in buying. In walking around the crumbling foundations of the stone dwelling, the wife stepped upon the rotten wooden cover of a narrow well, 60 feet deep. The cover broke and she slid, screaming, into the water. Unwelcome Forest Visitor

No matter what each has to do,
Each must to his own life be true.
—Old Mother Nature.

BECAUSE the cedar swamp over in the Green Forest is dark and full of hiding places it is a favorite place with many of the folk who do not go to the Sunny South in the winter. Jumper the Hare likes the cedar swamp. He likes it because it is so easy to keep hidden under the broad, spreading, always green, branches of the cedar trees.

This winter Welcome Robin had chosen to spend the winter there instead of flying way down to the Sunny South. This was because there had been a very big crop of cedar berries this year. He really didn't mind the cold. He really didn't mind the cold. He could snuggle in under the branches of the cedar trees where rough Brother North Wind couldn't get at him, and where Jack Frost couldn't pinch him too hard. You see, plenty of food makes a warm body, and Welcome Robin was having all the food he needed or wanted. He could get it without the trouble of looking for it. He was living on the berries of those cedar trees, and the berries of the cedar trees, and the berries of the mountain ash trees not far away.

Peter Rabbit liked the cedar reter Rabolt liked the cedar swamp for the same reason that cousin Jumper did. Sammy Jay visited it every day. Thunderer the Grouse and Mrs. Grouse spent much time there. Sometimes they could hear rough Brother North Wind roaring outside when inside there was hardly any wind at all. It was so nice there that now and then Welcome Robin just had to sing his message of cheer just as he always does when he comes up from the Sunny South in the spring.

from the Sunny South in the spring.

Welcome Robin was perched in the top of one of the trees, pouring out his message of cheer. It is a wonderful thing to be able to make others cheerful. That is just what he was doing. It would seem that no one could hear that cheerful message without feeling better for it. Good cheer is like measles; it is catching.

Suddenly Welcome Robin cut off his good cheer message right in the middle. He plunged headlong down in among the branches of the cedar trees. He had seen the last person in the world he wanted to see, or that any of the other folks there wanted to see. It was folks there wanted to see. It was Hooty the Owl. Hooty was spend-ing the winter in the Green Forest. Hooty is so tough that he manages somehow to live through even the

And there is no one feared more by the smaller people in fur and feathers, unless it is Shadow the Weasel. And Shadow himself is always on the watch for Hooty. Now Hooty flew to the top of the tallest tree and there he perched. He sat very straight as is his way. Suddenly he hooted. It was startling. He meant it to be. He was trying to scare those who might be hiding there in the swamp. He hoped to startle them enough to make them move. If they moved and rustled a twig or leaf or branch his wonderful ears would be sure to hear it. Then he would be able to fly straight to where that sound came from, and where that sound came from, and the chances were that his wonder rule eyes would see whoever had made that sound. The instant he hooted he leaned forward with his ears opened wide. But he didn't hear a sound. No, sir, he didn't hear a sound. No, sir, he didn't hear so much as a whisper. Of cours he knew that Welcome Robin was there because he had course he knew that Welcome Robin was keeping perfectly still. There was no dinner in the cedar swamp for Hooty that day.

New Rules Put Limit On Wild Cards

By OSWALD JACOBY

one of the important changes in the new code of laws governs the number of wild cards you are al-lowed to have in a canasta. In the old days you could add as many wild cards as you liked to a conpleted canasta.

Under the new code you may or the new code you may never have more than three wild cards in any canasta. There is, however, no limit on the number of natural cards in a canasta.

For example, suppose you put down four kings and three decreases in a meld thus completing a care.

What happens if a player does try to put a fourth wild card in a try to put a fourth wild card in a canasta? If anybody notices it in time, he may ask to have the canasta opened up. Then the three wild cards already in the canasta will be seen. The offender may use the wild card in some other meld or may discard it without penalty. However, if he decides to take the wild card back into his hand, his side is penalized 100 points.

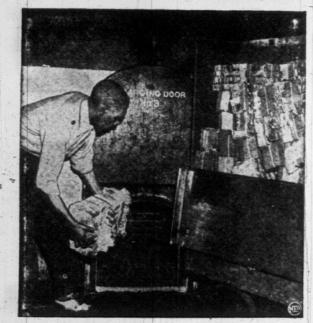

What happens if at the end of a hand it is discovered that a canasta contains four wild cards? It is then assumed that one of those wild cards is still unmelded. More-over if there is any doubt whether the extra card should be a joker or a deuce, it is assumed to be

Vancouver Island Stamps Feature Sale At New York

By R. NAIRNE

THE CATALOGUE for the third of the famous Reford sales to be held in New York Feb. 27 is now to hand and a glance through the pages shows that this wonderful accumulation of rare B.N.A. stamps is far from exhausted.

There are no less than 70 lots of B.C. and Vancouver Island, which will total around-$6,000 in value. Three more Canada 12d blacks, one being very fine, will come un der the hammer, as well as a fine unused 7½d. In New Brunswick there are seven of the one shillings, priced at $250 apiece and a fine 5c which shows the portrait of Postmaster Connell instead of the head of Queen Victoria, listed at $600. (The issuing of this stamp back in 1860 cost the postmaster his job, by the way.) In fact one can hardly think of a B.N.A. rarity that is not shown in profusion. A report on some of the prices re-alized will be given after the sale.

Another important sale took place in London recently, when a further selection of the Sugden

OF INTEREST TO PHILATELISTS

This is a new 12-franc postage stamp just issued by the French postal authorities. The dark brown stamp shows a front view of the famous collection was auctioned off. A penny black—the world's first stamp, used on May 2 (four days before the official date of issue) was bought for $720, or 100 times the usual value of the stamp. One used on day of issue (May 6) was sold for $230, which is probably a record for this first of first-day

British stamps are usually so carefully inspected before being issued to the public that errors in manufacture are almost non-ex-istent. But lately there have been istent. But lately there have been one or two cases where sheets of stamps have been discovered only partially perforated. The latest of these errors to appear was found on the penny value which turned up with the two top rows unperforated. These philatelic freaks are fetching big prices. A' block of six of the 2d. and 2½d recently sold for £220 and £200 respectively! Of course, if these printer's lapses become more common, collectors become more common, collect will offer much less for them

BAHAMAS ISSUE

Bahamas is preparing to issue still another set of 15 stamps with values up to the pound. This will make the fourth, series during the present King's reign and as each of them has a total face value of around $10, collectors are beginning to get a little fed up. It is a pity there is not enough co-operation among philatelists to have such issues boycotted. At one time these special issues were a good invest-ment, but today too many are printed to make them ever be rare.

Capt. B. C. Hinks of Vancouver who is a member of the Vancouver, Island Philatelic Society, has just been honored by being elected president of the B.N.A. Philatelic Society of New York, the first Canadian to hold that office.

Slick Stayman Bid Discloses Possibilities

By OSWALD JACOBY

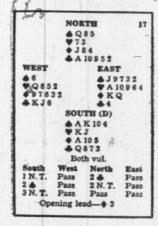

Many bridge players think the Stayman Convention is used only to show interest in a major suit. This is not so, however, as Samuel M. Stayman points out in his new book "Expert Bidding."

When the hand shown today was played, West knew that North's response of two clubs was the Stayman Convention, asking South to show a biddable major suit if he had one. (by coincidence, North actually had a club suit.)

South bid two spades, naturally enough, an dthen North went to two no-trump. Clearly, North had no real support for spades, since he did not raise that suit. Hence

West had been wondering whether to open from four hearts to the queen or from five small diamonds. When he reasoned that North was likely to have some four-eard holding in hearts, West decided to lead a diamond rather than a heart.

The diamond opening lead allowed South to make the contract. He won with the ace of diamonds and led a low club towards dummy

Shade Trees Will Add Value To Your Garden

A GARDEN with trees to provide shade is a comfort as well as a convenience during the hot summer days. When the sun gets too hot it's grand to have a place to sit awhile—an outdoor living-room where one may sit in the cool of a tree's leafy shade and enjoy the garden display seen from that point.

Under some trees, permanent seats may be placed, while under others, chairs and tables may be easily carried when needed for use. Just because the shade trees are used to sit under, does not mean that area cannot also be made at of flowers and shrubs under them.

Of course, the first thought should be given to the placement of the garden furniture, but plan the garden there, too.

When comfort and an attractive floral display are both desired, there are three simple but import-ant practices to follow.

. Trim the tree's branches high so there is pleinty of open space beneath for circulation of air. Keep the tree's branches open enough to admit a small amount of mottled sunlight if possible.

2. Choose the right kind of trees for the special purposes desired. Some trees are "dirty."

3. By selecting the right kinds of flowers and shrubs, an attractive and continuous floral display can surround the outdoor sitting room and beautify it.

years, so take plenty of time to consider all the good and bad points of any kind that may be recommended to you. Here are some points about trees that may be already in your gar-den or suggested to you for plant-

1. Beech—This tree is too seldom 1. Beech—This tree is too seldom used in gardens of this region. There are two sorts; one with purple leaves, the other green. Both are clean, hardy, attractive and practically trouble-free. When matured, the trees bear the well-known, flavorful, three-cornered beech nuts. Highly recommended. 2. Birch—This is a very pretty tree for light shade. Aphis and honey dew make it "dirty" to sit under. The open branches admit enough sun and air to enable plants to do well under it.

3. Catalpa—When fully grown, this is one of the most beautiful

4. Chestnut — The American

4. Chestnut — The American Sweet Chestnut is a perfect umbrella-shaped tree which grows rapidly to a large size. A very fine nut-bearing shade tree. Only "dirty" when the yellow string-like flower clusters drop in early July. Its leaves all drop at once in the fall and make a good quality

5-Fruit Trees - Apricot and apple trees are now becoming quite popular for small garden shade. Their lovely flower display in spring is highly desirable and at-tractive. Their fruit crop is, of course, to be considered. They are just as clean as many of the other trees that have no attractive flowers or fruit.

6. Maple-Fast-growing, heavy roots get into drain pipes and choke other plant roots. It exudes a sticky honey dew sap in summer which makes sitting underneath it unpleasant. Tables and chairs or seats cannot be left underneath

7. Sweet Gum — This native American tree is often listed as Liquid Amber. It is much like a maple, but is not "dirty" in a maple, but is not "dirty" in summer and roots behave themselves better. It has the wonderful autumn red and gold shades of the Vine Maple Leaf. A highly satisfactory tree for shade.

8. Walnut—A slow growing tree. Fine for shade and of good shape. It bears nuts when about 15 years old. Very few plants will succeed underneath it.

There are many dozen of usable shade trees. Consult a good nurseryman or landscape architect if you need help in making a selection. Remember the soil and location in your garden will have a bearing on your final choice. Highly satisfactory trees in another garsatisfactory trees in another gar den might be useless in yours. Q-The outside of my stone chimney is stained with what looks like creosote. Where did it come from and what can I do about it? -J.S.

J.S. A-What looks like creosote probably is rust. Natural stone often has a lot of iron in it, and rain dripping on it will leave rust stains. Various acids, which your hardware man will tell you about, will bleach the stone, but strong acids are a ticklish item for the home handyman to handle

Salt Needed

As some Ioous require salt to bring ou their flavor, so do certain bring out their flavor, so do certain beets, Swiss chard, table beet and turnip respond to applications of table salt along with the fertilizer, according to scientific workers in various parts of the world engaged in nutrient studies.

Workers in different countries are beginning to suspect that sodium (common salt is sodium chloride) may act as an important co-partner with potassium, calcium or magnesium stimulating their effectiveness by its presence.

flowers?—F.S.W.

A.—Perennials should never be planted close to a hedge since the roots of the hedge plants are bound to grow vigorously into the enriched soil of the flower bed. Leave two or more feet between the hedge and flower bed.

Q—Should fruit trees and grape vines be pruned during the winter? —S.E.

A-Fruit trees may be pruned any time the wood is not frozen. Grape vines should be cut back heavily for best results. Consult your state pomologist.

Q—Please give information on the general culture of the colorful Tigridias.—D.H. A—The Tigridia is related to the gladiolus and the cultural treatment is much the same. Plant corms in the spring as early as possible the spring as early as possible. Clump-planting is preferable to rows. Space corms five or six inches apart. They are not particular as to soil, but probably thrive best in a sandy loam. In the fall after tops have been killed by the frost, corms should be lifted and dried before storing in a cool place.

Q—What creeping plants are good among stepping stones?

A—My favorite is the tiny creeping Veronica. It hugs the earth, forming a thick carpet that is covered with tiny white or lavender-blue flowers. Another favorite is the mossy sandwort, Arenaria verna. A member of the pink family, it spreads rapidly—forms a dense mat that is covered in June with small starry white blossoms. Both can be grown from seed sown in sandy soil where you want them to grow.

Radiologists Bombard Each Other With New Ideas; Advance Medicine

DR. Richard Chamberlain of Philadelphia took a long look around the exhibition hall and said: "When you come to one of these meetings, you begin to feel like a one-eyed boy at a three-ring circus."

That is how a radiologist with 12 years of college and advanced training feels when his colleagues from all over the country gather to describe to each other the lates

And one of the 2,100 radiologists assembled at the convention in Chicago would concur with Dr. Chamberlain. Their science, vastly important not only in combating disease, but also in controling radiation effects in a potential atom bomb attack, has grown tremendously since the days of Madame Curie and Konrad

And yet, as Dr. Warren Furey, outgoing president of the Radiological Society of North America, put it: "We're just on the threshold of a whole new world in president."

According to 36-year-old Dr. Chamberlain, the convention was like going back to school—"a weeklong, concentrated, intense school with dozens of new developments

FROM ALL QUARTERS

"A radiologist," he explained, "is combination doctor, radiology specialist, physicist, chemist, photo-grapher and mechanic. So new trends can come from almost any quarter. If you've absorbed a frac-quarter. If you've absorbed a fraction of it when you go home, it's been a week well spent."

A few of the developments brought up at the meeting will illustrate his point:

Cobalt 60: A man-made radioactive substance for internal use.

it is cheaper than radium, less irritating to the patient, and easier to control.

The Westinghouse tube: It amplifies and enlarges X-rays images, making for better diagnoses. New high-speed X-ray machine:

It enables the technician to photo-graph a portion of the body from two angles at the same time. This was developed by Dr. Wendell Scott of St. Louis, who got the idea from observing the Fairchild aerial camera during World War II.

Treating heart disease with radioactive iodine: This was Dr. Chamberlain's paper, which showed how treating the thyroid gland with radioactive iodine relieved patients suffering from angina pectoris, a heart ailment characterized by crip-pling pains.

NEW DETECTOR

Crystal dosimetry: Still in the experimental stage, this is a new type of radio activity detector being developed by the navy.

On top of the customary deluge ideas, the big discussio of new ideas, the big discussion among the doctors was about their prospective role in an atom war. They will probably be the key men in the medical units which will treat the thousands of refugees from any atom-blasted area. Under the expanding civil defence est-up, the estimated 4,000 radiologists in the United States will be ready to fight the devastating effects of their science — same science which they are now emscience which they are now employing in a controlled, peaceful, beneficial manner.

Civil engineers from many countries will gather in Chicago in 1952 to take part in a centennial exposition in hohor of the American position in honor of the American Society of Civil Engineers. This society, organized in 1852, is now one of the largest technical societies in the United States. Before 1800 the only engineers were military engineers, and their job was to design fortifications and fighting equipment. Civilian bridges, roads, viaducts and build-ings were built by artisans with designs developed from experience. Engineers from Europe helped the American army during the Revo

The term "civil engineer" was adopted to distinguish these men from military engineers. Today there are many engineering societies, such as mining, mechanical, electrical and chemical, but they all had their inception in the original society of civil engineers founded in 1852.

How We Got Beacon Hill Park

REACON Hill Park without doubt is one of Victoria's greatest assets: Not only does 154-acre beauty spot rank as a source of pleasure to the thousands of annual tourists but it has a deep-down appeal but it has a deep-down appear to the home folks as well. Beacon Hill, it can be said, is a real people's park. Not the least of its appeal comes from its restful

But though the park is peaceful, But though the park is peaceful, its history is not. More squables and battles have been waged over Beacon Hill Park probably than any other pièce of land in this area. A study of old documents shows controversy over the park began almost as soon as Crown Governor James Douglas reserved the land for park purposes in 1858.

In subsequent years, the park was the issue in a battle between the Hudson's Bay Company and the British House of Commons; argu-ments between the colonial govern-ment and the City of Victoria, and their day.

To tell the story of Beacon Hill Park, one must go back to the year 1849. Then, as now, the park area as now, the park area had plenty of open spaces as well as wooded sections. These natural clearings were used quite regularly for rounders and cricket. And it was about this time, too, that some of the more sporting members of the community staged horse races there.

Jan. 13 was an important date in 1849 for it was on that day a Royal Grant was made, giving title to all land in the Colony of Van-couver Island to the Hudson's Bay lonization. It was agreed that the Hudson's Bay Company would pay rent for the island at the rate of ven shillings a year, payable at beginning of January.

The Crown made sure, however, that it would be able to get back the land at a later date if it wanted. In 1857 a select committee of the British House of Commons was appointed to consider reclaiming Vancouver Island for the Crown. As a result of the committee's report, notice was served the company on Jan. 20, 1858, that the Crown would take back the island on May 30.

The actual surrender, however, was not completed until April 3, 1867, owing to great difficulty experienced in clarifying accounts and land titles.

The Beacon Hill area was reserved as a park during the period when negotiations for repossession of the island were in progress. The order was made by James Douglas. The point as to whether he gave the order as chief factor of the Hudson's Bay Company or as governor of the colony has been questioned many times, but most historians believe he did so acting for the Crdwn. the Crown.

Governor Douglas reserved the park mainly because he liked to go there himself. Once he arranged a big picnic there in honor of Ad-miral Moresby and officers of H.M.S. Portland.

As soon as the governor made his decision with regard to pre-serving Beacon Hill, the site was surveyed and necessary documents for the transfer prepared. In February, 1859, all the necessary papers were shipped away to Eng-land to receive the seal of the Crown before being duly executed.

When Victoria's Famous Recreation Ground Was Young

Two British naval men and a Royal Marine spent an afternoon in Beacon Hill Park long decades ago, as their old-style uniforms in this picture make plain. In those days many of the trees were less than half the size they are now, and some now flourishing had not even taken root.

Higher officials of the Hudson's Higher officials of the Hudson's Bay Company in England said the Crown couldn't take the land for a park. They said the company had clear title to 3,084 acres at the southern tip of the island, which included the park and the townsite of Victoria, and although the Crown might take all the rest of the island back, it could not have that.

The company officers were able to produce a document signed be-for the Royal Grant of 1849, showing they had a case.

It was further found that, because they regarded the 3.084 acres as private property, H.C.B. officials had begun as early as 1858 to sell lots in that area without reference to the colonial government.

It was discovered portions of the public park reserve had been sold to private citizens.

One such citizen was John Morris who, when he found there was some question as to his right to own land in the reserve section, decided to protect his investment to some extent by building a fence around it.

Governor Douglas, who apparently had been unaware of the situation up until this time, wrote the Colonial Office, laying down encroachments by the company on the park reserve.

The Colonial Office, thrown in a dither by all this, decided to refer the whole question of the title of the 3,084 acres to the Privy Council.

In an attempt to bring about an earlier settlement, however, it was subsequently decided to have a board of arbitration rule on the not finalized until May of 1864.

During the whole of this time, from 1858 to 1864, administration of the park was under the control of the colonial government. Victoria had been incorporated in 1862 but had not changed things since the park was left outside the town limits

But then in 1867, the incorpo ation act was changed to put Beacon Hill Park within the cono pass by-laws in relation to it. NOTHING DONE

After two years had gone by, the park issue came up in the Legislature. Members wanted to know what was being done to develop the park. The answer was, nothing.

The house was divided on what should be done. Dr. J. S. Heimcken, speaker of the Legislature, supported by M. W. T. Drake, both representing Victoria City, argued Victoria should be given a deed of trust to administer the park.

They met strong opposition from Joseph Trutch, chief commissioner of lands and works, and Robert W. W. Carrall, member for the Cariboo.

"Nothing could be clearer that the incompetency of the municipal council as might be seen from the condition of the streets," the Cariboo member declared in a speech against the Helmcken proposal. With such resistance as this, the idea of placing full responsibility of park maintenance on the city was lost. The Legislature, in fact, withdrew the park from the town limits and jurisdiction over the park reverted to the colony's department of lands and works.

That's the way things stayed until B.C.'s first park legislation was introduced by the second provincial assembly seven years later. The legislation was called "An Act for the Management of Public Parks, 1876."

Under this act administration of Beacon Hill Park was taken away from the government department and placed in the hands of two

The first trustees of the park were Senator W. J. Macdonald and J. W. Douglas, son of James. The two were appointed in 1877 and served until 1879, when the Legislature changed its attitude toward Victoria and made the city truste

It was under this same amendment that the council saw its way to introduce a special by-law regulating the use of Beacon Hill Park. The law specified that people could not graze their cattle there; could not play games of characterists. not play games of chance there; could not discharge firearms there; and could not use the grass for

Dots Add Dash In Silks For Spring

By GAILE DUGAS

SILK, in many variations, will S rustle enticingly through warm spring days. For silk, in prints, surrahs, taffetas and shantungs, is a big, happy revival in dresses.

The trumpet line leads dress silhouettes this spring. It's used in many variations on the one theme: centre-front trumpet, one-side trumpet and back trumpet. But the tunic is important, too, and so are diagonal and oblique lines.

The costume, a dress with its own jacket or coat, is coming up in importance. Frequently, the tie-in comes through dress fabric which is matched to coat or jacket lining. Elsenberg uses pure silk surrah in grey, speckled with thiy yellow dots, for a classic spring coat dress. The skirt flares gently; the bodice is tucked. A yellow kid belt encircles the waist. Pearl buttons are used for the front closing, from neck to hemline.

Silk surrah appears again in another dress from this same designer. This time, it's pink dotted in black. A straight wrap-around skirt has jet button closing and is topped by an overlap fitted bodice. The wing collar is notched and sleeves are smartly short. The dress is belted in black patent.

Good Use Of Vanity Lamps

It's a clever woman who, under-standing the important part be-coming lights can play in enhanc-ing her beauty, also realizes that the place for flattering illumination is not her dressing table.

Here you need the unvarnished truth, if you are to do the best possible job of playing up good points and toning down imperfections.

Lighting experts offer these suggestions for lighting your vanity. Two lamps, one on each side, are necessary in order to obtain balanced illumination, they say. Otherwise, shadows darkening one side of your face tend to make for uneven amplication of commetter.

Speedy Painting

A synthetic rubber emulsion paint now available in Canada can be used on wallpaper, wallboard, plaster, wood, brick, cement or other surfaces previously painted with resin emulsion or oil type finishes. It dries in 20 to 30 minutes and a second coat can be applied within three hours.

Pure silk for spring is interpreted by Eisenberg in these designs. Pure silk surrah in grey with tiny yellow dots fashions a coat dress (left) with gently flared skirt, tucked bodice, three-quarter sleeves. A dress with straight wrap-around skirt (above) is in pink surrah with black dots, its overlap bodice fitted, its swing collar notched. The belt is in shiny black patent leather.

Pumice And Cream Are Aids In Making Elbows Lovelier

Many women tend to treat their elbows like step children, utterly neglecting them while lavishing attention upon other beauty chores.

Since people tend to notice love-liness as a whole instead of giving credit for individually pretty parts, it's poor policy to adopt this out-of-sight, out-of-mind attitude toor-sight, out-of-mind attitude to-ward anything so conspicuous as your elbows. Their glaring defects can spoil your entire beauty picture. One well-known cosmetics firm offers an elbow kit to aid women whose arms are marred mid-way by callouses, scaliness, graininess or enlarged pores.

Since smoothing is a logical first step in any elbow treatment, a step in any elbow treatment, a pumice bag is provided for this pur-pose. This is a small silk pouch through which powdered purnice sifts for abrasive action as you briskly massage the rough areas.

The next procedure is softening. This is done with an elbow cream especially rich in lublicants. For protection of clothes or bedding after the cream is smoothed on, elbow guards are supplied in the kit.

Made of shining satin which has been mated with elastic for sleek fit, these guards add a touch of glamor to your elbow routine.

Your ears are more than hear ing aids. Often the success with which you play them up or down, as the cases may be, marks the difference between good looks and downright unattractiveness.

It's a good idea to judge your own ears, without prejudice, ac-cording to their merits. Then con-ceal them as need be.

This doesn't mean you must stick to one hair-do for life. Work out your own adaptations as coiffure fashions change, remembering always that the important thing is cover-up for your mis-matched, badly-shapen or protruding ears.

If the style calls for brevity of cut, you can trim your hair, too, but never shorter than lobe length. If trends are toward a pulled-back effect, sleek your locks to the rear, too. But arrange a strand to cover each ear as well.

Standard Viola Comes Into Use

The viola is an awkward instru-ment. If it's small enough to tuck under the chin, it probably will squeak like a tomcat. If it's big enough to give a round sonorou tone, you need your arms stretched to play it well.

Lionel Tertis, London, who has played this big brother to the violin for 57 years, got tired of instruments that were too big, too small, too round, or too flat. So he designed the "Tertis model," 16% inches long, big enough for sonority, yet small enough to handle.

The Tertis model combines the Clap him into tights and doublet (slightly threadbare at the elbows) and he would look the part to the last hey-nonney-nonney. For he has the kind of laugh that Falstaff had,

Unlike the woman who lived in a shoe (and had so many children she didn't know what to do) he has so many children that he just had to know what to do with them. So to know what to do with them. So he goaded the Department of Education into opening a school here for them. And to move the Department of Education to such a deed, and to the appointing of a teacher, is no small piece of magic that pointed finger down the trail to the Hot Springs. "Yes," I said, "It's just what I've been waiting for." And without a towel or anything approaching a swim suit, I found myself striding grimly through the forest to the first bit of magic planned by the Wizard of Hot Springs Cove.

SPIDERY BRIDGES

The trail went on and on. wound through the heavy under-growth and over the tree roots, down into hollows where already the dusk was settling, up over the rocks, by spidery bridges and desoate lengths of tree-branch board walk. And though in the distance I could hear the sea sound, I knew that the light would soon be gone, and I had neither torch nor knowledge of the way.

It must, I reflected, have taken much toll and time to clear, and keep cleared, this narrow trail down which I moved—so there must be something important at the end of it. But that end was an uncon-scionable time a'coming. And the silence deepened so that the startled shriek of a bird seemed to set the shriek of a bird seemed to set the shadows shivering.

But at length, out through a hole in the tracery of trees I stepped, and there among the rocks the steam of the hot sulphur springs was rising. And under a cascade of the warm water a very pale pink, very bare old gentleman was singing. A Swedish ballad into the cavernous rocks around him.

rhous rocks around him.

Again I imagined that the light was going, but in another minute, wearing nothing but the camera slung round my neck, I joined him him in naked contemplation of the magic of Hot Springs Cove.

It was not easy to waik or even stand on the sharply pointed rocks beside this steaming water. Bur I managed to put my camera or a high rock ledge and stand beneath the warm flow of the water.

I felt—like the Swedish gentleman who had now bounded away man, who had now bounded away and was drying himself on a ragged towel that it was worth singing about. In more known parts of the world, I reflected, this spot would be a magnet for many thou-sands, who would be asked to pay to approach it, and buy postcards of it on the way out. Here, on this little-visited west coast, it spouts forever a warm welcome to the few who come. And there are no pos cards.

Suddenly aware of another visi Suddenly aware of another visitor, I turned and saw yet another of the visiting fishermen from the cove. He was a dark haired man this time, younger and sturdler, and he was also wearing a friendly welcome. Having sat down in a delightful pool, where the temperature in the water was now decidedly more inviting than the air above it, I took his photograph, then later waited for him to get dressed, and walked back with him along the trail to the store of Ivan Clarke.

SELLS EVERYTHING

This magnificent Tudor Canadian (his mother came from England anyway) runs the kind of store that anyway) runs the kind of store that sells everything you ever thought of, and a lot of those things you never remember until you're half-way home again. Customers are almost entirely the fishing and voyaging folk who put into Hot Springs Cove for refuelling, for supplies, or—very, very rarely—to bring someone along to the hot springs themselves.

When I stepped up into the store there was a genial skipper taking his leave of Ivan Clarke, with a his leave of Ivan Clarke, with a package under his arm. Ivan came forward around the sacks of flour, crates of canned goods, fishing tackle—and seizing my baggage and coat led me into the simple room they had prepared for me. But Mrs. Clarke had appeared by then, and was standing under her husband's shoulder — a dark-haired. deep-eyed little person with a shy kind of welcome that had in some curious way the same warm hospi-tality to a stranger that must have marked the days of the early

It was difficult to realize that this kindly, frail-looking body was the mother of all those husky grow-ing children. But there was no ing children. But there was no mistaking her homey pride — disguised now and then with a touch of discipline—as she talked to them. "Supper," she said with a smile of greeting, "is ready when you are. And there's some grilled fresh salmon." ("Ma!" piped a small, invisible Clarke, "when can we light that fire outside?" "After supper, Jimmy!")

Jimmy.")
I followed her behind the store into the veritable labyrinth of little rooms and corridors where the Clarke family is always at home. And I was ushered into a room which seemed to be filled with nothing but small faces — and a tableful of good, plain food.

VICTORIA TIMES MAGAZINE SECTION

You could hardly see the food for the faces. Faces of all sizes and expressions. Glowing with such a ruddy health that you felt you could hold your hands over them and thaw your heart out. Only ten were around the table, however. Two were grown up, and in Victoria. Four more were in Sas-

They had the brightest eyes (mostly a Facilic Ocean blue) and the biggest appetites you might finds in a month's march. And despite all the energy that was boiling up around me, one look from brother Hugh—who is just in his teens—was enough to freeze them into a picture of ten small angels quietly eating salmon.

TRACHER PRESENT

There was, however, another reason for good behaviour. For there at the top of the table was their schoolmistress—a commanding, formidably-built young woman in a rough, masculine Indian sweater and a pair of corduroy trousers.
But beneath the obvious discipline (and a voice, I am quite sure, that must be capable of barrack-square results) Miss Anita Willett is just a generous helping of the sait of earth.

Far apart from the outside world, with none of its frills or fancies, she is doing a formidable job of she is doing a formidable job of work teaching the Clarke family school. In the long evenings there are no movies, no shows of any kind.

No . . . but this is where Ivan Clarke becomes the Wizard.

With the same thoroughness with which many people down the other side of the Island make their own houses and their own furniture, so does Ivan Clarke make his own magic for the rapt and wondering entertainment of the Clarke children Father is a conjuror. He has a bag of tricks . . with string . . with borrowed objects . . with cards, that keep his boisterous brood in rapt attensomething new; something a bttle bit different: something a little bit time. But I couldn't get them to admit it. They were loyal to the last moppet. And to them, this rollicking father of theirs is all the theatres of the world in one breathtaking performance.

Ivan has other wizardries. One is turkey dinner to all the hinterland at Christmas: with turkeys brought up north for the occasion; with holly and evergreens all over the little schoolroom, and a Christmas tree from the rocks outside, and boatloads of merry folk from all the inlets round about (and from far about, too, for that matter). And in addition—("Ma! Can we light that fire now?" "For pity's sake, YES, Jimmy. And don't get too near it. Keep them at a safe distance now, Hugh!" "Yes, Ma.") They lit their fire at last. It was a great big, gorgeous red and little schoolroom, and a Christmas a great big, gorgeous red and golden, snap-and-crackling bonfire, with dry branches and old crates from the store, and a hundred odds and ends—and ten superb potatoes.

Ivan Clarke and Mrs. Clarke, and then Miss Willett, came out to the rim of the fire and stood with their backs to the blue-black shadows, watching. And in the eyes of the Wizard of Hot Springs Cove there was a glint of happiness. Fer this was clearly the life, and the children were proving it! It had been worth a long struggle for; worth living in a cold tent for, and planning for, and finally growing into.

All this I knew as I watched him gazing at the ten small faces closely ringed together, lit by the roaring blaze.

They were looking deep, and dreaming deeper, into the glowing embers. I asked myself what they saw there. Had I asked them, each one of them would have told me a different story. But whatever they different story. But whatever they saw, it could hardly have been more magic than what we saw ourselves.

For what we saw was Canada in the making.

New Watches Change With Styles

Fashions in watches, like fashions in clothes, change with the season, There was a time when this wasn't true. Watches were handed down from generation to generation, the only requirement being that they kept accurate time. Today's watches keep accurate time but they're also fun to wear. If you have a passion for watches, as many people do, you can collect them in an endless number of styles. All it takes is money.

The season of Lent and the season of rising meat prices correspond this year. So does the abundance of sauerkraut made from 1950's bumper cabbage crop. Put them together and what have you got?—a few succulent ideas to brighten meatless meals.

Mrs. Wilson Compton, wife of the president of the State College of Washington in Pullman, Wash, praises the flavor combination of Washington state apples and sauerkraut.

Care Of Teeth Always A 'Must'

As the mother of four children and the wife of a prominent man, Mrs. Compton has learned to give a gourmet twist to the simplest foods. The importance of thorough oral care can't be over-emphasized in your quest for beauty. Because clean, shining teeth rank so high among the fundamentals of true loveliness, they're worth the extra couple of minutes a day that mark the difference between dutiful slapdash and real effort.

High-spot brushing is not enough. Actually, it may be harmful if food particles are pushed by careless brushing into crevices.

It's best to brush with short vertical strikes from your gums outward to the edge of your teeth. This may be difficult until you master the trick of it, but results are much better than the easy, noneffective horizontal see-sawing that many women use. Make certain you don't skip your less-accessible

Rinsing is an important part of tooth care, too. Spend enough time on this part of the procedure to wash away all the particles loos-ened in brushing.

It's a good idea to see your dêntist at least once a year for pro-fessional cleansing. He's equipped to deal with stains and accumula-tions of tartar that may dim the beauty of your smile, in spite of the faithfulness of your home care.

Wells Biography Brilliant But Much Yet To Be Told

H. G. Wells—Prophet of Our Day. By Antonina Valentin. The John Day Company. 338 pp. $5.00.

THE FIRST THING to be said about the first posthumous biography I of that remarkable man H. G. Wells is that it should not have been written—yet.

Brlliantly as it is written and deeply as it penetrates the subject's character and mind, Miss valentin's book comes at a time when the effect of what Wells had to say, like many of his prophecies, is still to come. The whole story with its ramifications and implica-with its raminications and implica-tions simply cannot be told.

Nor could any contemporary biogsapher fully explore the man's personal life while those who had the greatest influence on him are still living.

Nevertheless H. G. Wells-Pro-Nevertheless, H. G. Wells—Pro-phet of Our Day is still a brilliant book by one of the finest biogra-phers of our day as her lives of Heine and Leonardo da Vinci so eloquently testify.

FREELY EXPLORED

There were no shackles regard on her exploration of Wells' almost incredible gift for prophecy, his fiery spirit of revolt that found the Fabianism of Shaw too pedestrian, his deep social consciousness and his profound faith in mankind a faith that wavered only in his ast days, virtually on his deathbed.

One thing Miss Valentin has one thing Miss Valentin has done is to explode Wells' own evaluation of himself—he said once that if brains could be put on show like cats or dogs, his would not take even a third prize. Consistently he denied he could write; nor had any of this self-depreciation in it any vestige of mock modesty. All his success he attributed to clarity of vision and a revolt against the appalling poverty of his early life. his early life.

"I came up from the poor in a state of flaming rebellion, most blasphemous and unsaintly," he once wrote, and his whole life reflects this attitude.

Of his writing he said: "I write like I walk, because I

LIBRARY LEADERS

As Miss Valentin points out, this did not mean that Wells' novels were not intended to entertain. He could paint a portrait with the best of them, create a dramatic situation or tickle the ribs of the staidest of readers. Wells, as a writer, is neglected

now. Of his contemporaries, Galsworthy, Somerset Maugham and Arnold Bennett all are probably read more by both young and old, but it is impossible not to believe that Wells will experience a rennaissance of popularity perhaps a generation hence, when still more of his forecasts have come true.

Miss Valentin has pictured Wells as an intensely vibrant and human being, taking his eager adolescence, his groupings toward a satisfactory sex-life, his marriages and mistresses, and making of them a wonderfully readable book.

Musical Art Society Covers Wide Field

WE WOULD like to pay a bit of tribute this week to an organization that has been in continual existence in Victoria for a number of years. We refer to the Victoria Musical Art Society, which is a continuation of the former Women's Musical Club.

It has always served the excellent purpose of centralizing a wide variety of local musical talent and providing an outlet for the younger group of aspiring artists. Lately vever, the society has strength ened its influence and become more of an asset to the musical com-munity than ever.

This is in good part due to the ong range, constructive planning of the president, Dr. Rodger J. Manning and to that vital undertaking—the scholarship fund, which has already benefited several prom-months ahead, not only for the purpose of entertainment but for the exploration of definite paths in music, for the encouragement of ensemble performance and the development of the best of the city's considerable talent.

With only two months left of the society's current season, the crowning event will take place on Wednesday next. The recital on this occasion will revolve around con temporary British composers; it will be in the nature of a chamber concert with Nora Jones Jeffries and Peggy Walton Packard as contralto and soprano soloists.

Clifford Evens, concert master of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Palmer, will perform Edmund Rubbra's 2nd Sonata for violin and piano. An Arnold Bax Sonatina for 'cello and piano will be played by Mary Hammond and Una Calvert and the latter two, with Clifford Evens, will perform an Armstrong Gibbs trio.

On various occasions it has been suggested there should be some sort of clearing house for concert dates for Victoria. At one time, some attempt was made along those lines with little success

Actually, however, it would not be necessary if organizations would give a little more thought and time checking proposed dates before Famous Artists are not free agents in the matter of dates, being tied to touring itineraries, an engagement is usually fixed at least two or three weeks ahead. An inquiry at the box office would almost always settle the question.

These clashes must be disheartening for everybody— especially the press which cannot be in more than one and a half places at a time! Certainly they endanger the financial health of one or more of the organizations involved.

Some curiosity was evidently roused at the Rise Stevens concert,

Kamloops Small But Lusty In Eighties

KAMLOOPS was very much in the rough during the con-struction of the C.P.R.—just a small one-street town along the bank of the Thompson River, the wharf for river boats-Indians, half breeds, Chinese, laundries, and mills on the river bank - and church, hotels stores, post office, court house, and the white population on the upper side with the rolling hills

Along that one street you were likely to see life and nature of all kinds. You might have to run for horses were always running away there—or a band of cattle being driven to the slaughter yards—un-trained horses just in from the range-or a band of silly sheep run ning hither and thither. Even dogs seemed to be out of control for they would fight to the bitter

It was a construction town that seemed to explain everything for the short time it lasted. People worked hard, fought hard, played hard. I saw things in the two years I was there that I never saw all the rest of my life. I was just a little girl and, rough as the place almost as I liked with a little darky girl on one side, and a French-Canadian girl on the other. They were both Roman Catholics and very good compani

FLED FROM SNAKE

At the back of our cottage there was a very deep rocky ravine where we often went to play. There were many lovely wild flowers and were many lovely wild flowers and at the top a peculiar cave which fascinated us. It looked and tasted like Epsom salts. Natives said that long ago a bear hibernated there. We never saw a bear, but did see a rattlesnake. One very hot day we were playing near the cave when Minnie, my French-Canadian friend exclaimed "Oh-Canadian friend exclaimed "Oh-Canadian friend, exclaimed "Oh. look at those pretty rags!" and stooped to pick them up. The rag moved and reared its head.

Minnie yelled, "It's a snake, run!" It came up higher and higher and rattled. Believe me, we ran as we had never run before. It did not follow us, however, but uncoiled, rattled and slithered away. We did not stop until we were safely home. We were told that in those days they were occasionally seen, but not often. That was our only experience and we avoided the cave and ravine for a long time. Kamloops was a great place in those days for dances and parties, quiet or hilarious, according to the company. Children were often taken along as in those days there were few servants or maids to leave them with, which was rather a nuisance. I remember going to one—a very big one—which was beld in our schoolhouse and given by a bachelor, who owned the building and lived upstairs. They had the usual guessing games, charades, and tableaux, and games, charages, and tableaux, and ended up with dancing and supper upstairs in his apartment. I was only eight years old and grew terribly worried as I watched everyone I knew select a partner and disappear up this narrow stairway.

There was a lot of chattering and laughing going on. I was almost on the verge of tears when the last man, a very tall young man, came to me and with exaggerated politeness bent and offered me his arm saying, "Come along, little girl, we are part of the fun."

So up we went. I did not see anything funny about it at the time, but we were greeted with great shricks of laughter and hand clapping. We were "the long and the short of it."

as a source of pleasure by many blind persons who felt the loss of their sight had brought with it the loss of the rhythm of music. Nowadays it is estimated one-half rowadays it is estimated one-half the social gatherings organized for the benefit of the sightless are given over largely to this form of recreation. Picnics provide another outlet.

White Cane Week, just observed under the sponsorship of the Cana-dian Council of the Blind and the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, had "Rehabilitation Through Recreation" as its theme.

Speaking on this subject, Mrs. Catherine Elson, president of the Amicus Social Club of the Blind, Regina, said:

"In our club the program of games, contests and dancing in which all the blind take part, has brought a new sense of release and freedom to many who had almost given up seeking pleasure in their former activities and drifted into a 'passive acceptance of having entertainment presented to them ready made'."

"At this time of year," said R. W. Beath, national director of Rec-reation for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, "snow storms, cold weather and slush in much of Canada, make going about difficult for everyone. For the blind the streets are almost impassable.

"Notwithstanding, the sightless are not deterred from taking part in many activities. All over the Dominion there are social clubs sponsored by the Canadian Council of the Blind and the C.N.I.B., whose members and friends go to meet-ings all through the year."

In addition, many of them take in weekly sessions of the local blind bowiers' leagues, which have been formed in most of Canada's larger cities. "Blind bowiers are most enthusiastic and don't miss their meetings unless they are sick," Mr. Beath stated.

sick," Mr. Beath stated.

They compete in teams for trophies and prizes on local levels, and in clubs on league levels. The Western Ontario League comprises 21 teams from six Ontario cities. Other leagues have been formed in the western provinces and the mariular among the blind," explained Mr. Beath, "not just in summer when the weather is warm and the lake easy of access, but in winter in the indoor pool." At present in four cities, Vancouver, Regina and St. John, special classes are held under the direction of the C.C.B. and the C.N.I.B. for blind persons who wish either to learn to swim or to improve their strokes.

PATIENCE NEEDED

Of course there must be special instructors who have the patience and interest to give in words and by touch the careful explanation needed. The sighted would have to watch a class in operation in order to grasp the method of teach ing swimming procedure to those who cannot see. The success of such classes is evidenced by the fact that several students from four special classes have passed their nior, intermediate and senior Red

"Following White Cane Week, and for the rest of the winter season," Mr. Beath requests, "let us remember that blind people would be glad of a lift to and from their various activities. If you have room in your car, the offer of a ride will be most acceptable."

New Brain Tests Detect Disorders

The machine, the doctor said, picks up the baby's brain cell waves and records them in wavy lines. The lines tell the doctor many things.

"Most brain damage of the kind that result in convulsive disorders begin before the child is three years old," Dr. Kellaway said. "When we can diagnose the trouble during infancy, many times the damage can be repaired by surgery."

LONG A HAUNT OF BIRD LOVERS

In his rambles Mr. Connell used to find Pemberton Woods well tenanted by small birds throughout the winter. The numbers, he notes, have greatly degreesed in that district as a result of the extension of building.

Nature Rambler Studies Birds Wintering Here

By ROBERT CONNELL

THE juncoes and the chickadees are familiar visitors in the winter and assiduous guests at their respective feeding places. But much as we appreciate them, there are other small birds to be occasionally seen flitting among the branches of the evergreens and seeking their meals in the old-fashioned way. Such are the bush-tits, a pair of which I watched the other day.

With their mouse-grey color they are almost invisible on a duli day o long as they remain among the shadowing foliage.

The golden-crowned kinglets are more frequently seen in the same environment. They are very lively little birds distinguished by their caps, which have a bright yellow stripe down the middle: in the male the yellow deepens to orange. Like the chickadees, they are typi-cal evergreen forest birds. Another kinglet more rarely seen is the ruby-crowned which has a patch of scarlet on the top of the head, but this touch of color is only seen under excitement. A white ring round the eye is also a notable mark of this little bird. John Bur feathers, hopping about as restles as a spirit," is very true and apt.

They and the chickadees actually are more approachable along the forest trails where they seem filled with the spirit of curiosity as they follow the traveler and look down upon him from overhanging

All winter long the Pemberton Woods used to be well tenanted by small birds, but the number has greatly decreased of late years with the extension of building. There is one kind, however, that is almost always heard and not infrequently seen by the patient observer. It is the one variously known as the towhee, chewink, cat bird, or ground robin. The first three names have been given it popularly because its call suggests the mewing of a cat.

Anyone who first hears this call one of the bird's favorite haunts, ne dark overshadowed bed of a the dark overshadowed bed of a stream, will, I think, almost instinctively be reminded of a cat. It is a surprise to come on the bird itself for the first time as its plumage of black with white spots and its white breast bordered with dark chestnut red reveals it.

LIKE A QUAKER

The towhee species are widely distributed across this continent north and south, east and west, differing of course with their regions of habitation. The California one for example is very much less striking than ours. When I saw one in a flower-bed of our garden in Gilroy it seemed like a Quaker relative in its dress of grey and relative in its dress of grey and brown, C. C. Abbott, an American naturalist, describes the species found in New Jersey in his "Rambles About Home" and it is interesting to see how like it is to ours in voice and habits though living on the far side of the continent.

Lower Barriers At University

Columbia University has an unusual plan for offering a college education to adults who never were able to complete high school or preparatory courses. It is being described as a "marked success" by educators.

Pro. Louis Hacker, director of the school of general studies, said the 51 pioneer students were making excellent progress in the "validation semester," the first half-year of their course. Those who achieve passing grades will con-tinue their studies as full-fledged college students.

Hundreds of applicants gathered at Columbia when the 197-year-old

What Creates Best Seller Still Mystery

NOT long ago a Superior Court judge of California granted a divorce to a woman whose husband would not allow her to read enough to "keep up with the current best sellers." There are other signs that the reading of new books is becoming an accepted part of normal life, and it was estimated at the end of the war that about one-third of the population of the United States, who were over 15 years old, read at least one book a month.

They were using as many dollars for books alone as they had spent during a depression year on news-papers, magazines and books

What is a best seller? "In their time," writes James Hart in The Popular Book (one of the most unusual American literary histories, which has just been published by Oxford University Press), "many men have considered the question of what makes one book sell more than another and none have found a definite answer. Samuel Butler . . . reconciled himself to this quandary by writing. dary by writing:

"There are some things which it is madness not to try to know but which it is almost as much madness to try to know. Sometimes publishers, hoping to buy the Holy Ghost with a price, fee a man to read for them and advise them. This is but as the vain tossing of insomnia. God will not have any human being know what will sell."
"Robert Southey, who wrote thousands of pages of prose and verse, of which today only his story of the Three Little Bears' is remembered, and remembered without attribution to its author, also pondered the problem, with this summary: There are some things which it

Dr. Hart, "was in part attributable to Alexander Woollcott, whose Woollcott Reader issued in 1935 sold to 105,000 people who admired his taste and expected his bittersweet personality to be adumbrated in the prose and poetry he selected." When publishers saw the idea accepted, they followed and there was an anthology for every taste: was an anthology for every taste; Treasury of the World's Great Let-ters, Stories for Sportsmen, or the Bedside Book of Best Love Stories.

QUESTION OF AGE

Lord Essher was probably the most lucid judge of his time. "He used to fumble with his hands heavily loaded with rings," ues Alexander, "when Mrs. Weldon a one-time beauty, who developed a mania for litigation and appeared before his court on Monday mornings on unending personal applica-tions, flattered him and led him to make soothing and propitiatory remarks to her great satisfaction.
One one occasion Mrs. Weldon complained that the judge from whom she was appealing was too old to understand her case. Lord Essher said: 'Last time you were here you complained that your case had been tried by my brother Bowen and you tried by my brother Bowen and you said he was only a boy and could not do you justice. What age do you want the judge to be?"
"Your age,' promptly replied Mrs. Weldon."

So More May Have Power

BRITISH COLUMBIA Power Commission's headquarters staff of 75 men and women has moved into its new four-story, $477,000 head office block at Blanshard, Burdett and McClure. It is the first time all have been under one roof. But the important thing about the move, apart from the added convenience and economy it allows, is the gearing of this fire-year-old organization for expansion through its centralized, streamlined head offices in the immense and wilely-scattered districts in which it operates and will operate.

Already the commission is delivering in 25 power districts, and will add Ucluelet-Tofino as a 26th this year, all going well. Its investment "in generating, transmission and distribution plant and buildings" is over $40,000,000. It serves nearly 45,000 customers.

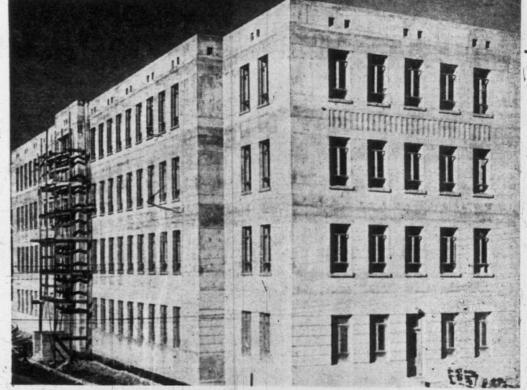

Always insistent, the demand of B.C. speople still unserved or inadequatel serve with power, has become vociferous in manareas. For they have seen what the development of abundant power has done others. On Vancouver Island, for example! The John Hart development was an important, if not a deciding factor, in establishment of big new pulp and milling industries on the Island, like Bloedel, Stewart and Welch at Port Alberni, the MacMillan plant at Cedar, near Nanaimo, and the $40,000,000 pulp and paper industry now building at Duncan Bay.

The commission is a governmentappointed body, comprising S. R. Weston, chairman, and Maj.-Gen. W. W. Foster and Forrest L. Shaw. But it operates independently, except that capital expenditures must be approved by order-in-council.

The new building is not yet wholly completed. It was designed for economy and efficiency. It just misses being austere. Later, shrubs will be planted in the terraced grounds, and the structure will have a coat of paint.

But even now, before the contractors' men are out of the building, engineers and draughtsmen are working on plans for future power developments, construction goes forward, the accounting department draws closer the control of the far-spread coastal and interior regions of operation, and before long a two-way radio system will link head office with its districts... from Dawson Creek to Smithers, Lillooet to Golden, Alert Bay to Duncan, and all the rest of the 26... and with its crews wherever they may be working in the field.

Days Of Waltz Live Anew At Second Symphony Ball By ELIZABETH FORBES

The gay, romantic days of old Vienna—when the Stausses charmed a happy, flirtatious populace with their beloved watzes—came to life again at the second annual Symphony Ball yesterday evening in the Empress Hotel, where, during the supper interval, danced a suiviled and diproduce the water than the supper interval. dancers swirled and dipped to watz tunes played by the Victoria Symphony Orchtstra.

Sophistication of the modern dance was provided by Len Acres d his orchestra with sultry voiced Gloria Berry as soloist. Attractive gowns in every color of the rainbow, worn by feminine guests, added the extra touch of enchantment.

Mrs. S. D. Magkham chose mint green taffeta shot with American Beauty tones, enhanced with a cluster of velvet roses at the waistline, and rhinestone jewelry. Black taffeta was the choice of Mrs. J. F. K. English, designed with triangles of net in the skirt, and white lace bodice. She wore pearls.

A dark blue taffeta with sash trimmed with American Beauty was worn by Mrs. D. B. Roxburgh; a formal off-shoulder gown of turquoise taffeta faille with turquoise brooch and matching earrings by Mrs. W. H. Hickman and a bouffant skirted navy taffeta with revers of navy and white enhancing the slim bodice by Mrs. J. Alan Baker.

A coronet of fresh pink carnations complemented the pink net gown worn by Mrs. H. P. Johns, styled with fitted bodice etched with silver thread and very full double skirt. Rhinestone jewelry completed the ensemble.

Mrs. Hugh Stephens was gowned in a striking printed taffeta, white and mauve flowers on a black background; Mrs. H. F. Pullen in rose beige lace with brilliant clips; Mrs. D. L. Raymond in white lace over taffeta with gardenias, and Mrs. Maurice Oliver in a sheath frock of agua taffeta.

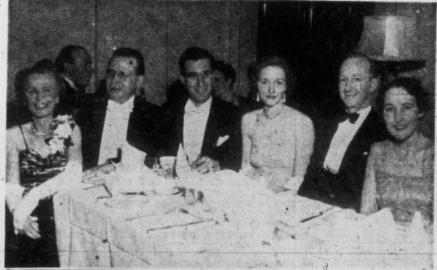

An imported ball gown of white lace and pleated tulle, the codice embroidered with pearls and brilliants was choice of Mrs. H. R. Ruttan. She wore a diamante tiara in her dark hair with necklace and earrings to match. Mrs. Logan Mayhew was in white satin, the bouffant skirt striped with white taffeta. Her jewels

Mrs. Ian Butters was attractive in a strapless net gown and matching stole, the skirt featuring three stiffened flounces of the net; Mrs. C. H. Moore was in a period gown of olive green faille taffeta, enriched with ecru lace ruffles at the neckline and Mrs. Gordon Abernethy in brown taffeta, shot with gold and copper tones. Antique gold drop earrings studded with amethysts, gold velveteen with deep cowl neckline and full skirt was worn by Mrs. D. A. Hewitt.

Mrs. Len Acres' gown was powder blue taffeta featuring an overskirt of fuchsia and royal blue net; Mrs. Arthur Baker's, butterfly grey taffeta with large taffeta bow on the left shoulder:

Mrs. Goldwyn Terry's, a grey and peach floral.

Pearl grey chiffon with matching stole fashioned Mrs. Kenneth Boorman's dress, with which she wore vivid red roses and brilliant necklet and earrings. Mrs. John Hedley was in a black and green printed crepe; Miss Elsie Appleyard in rustling taffeta in an antique gold tone designed with off-shoulder neckline and hoop skirt; Miss Elizabeth Mackie in a gown of Alice blue lace over faille. Her necklace was Burma jewels.

Attending the Symphony Ball together were, top, left to right, Dr. and Mrs. Roy Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood B. Marshall and Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Trenholme. Common Cold Cause Of Most Absenteeism

A sizeable drop in communic able diseases was noted in October, November and December of 1950, compared with the same months of 1949, in the quarterly report of the Union Board of Health for Victoria and Esquimalt Friday.

There were 17 cases of chicken pox compared with 52 in 1949; four cases of measles compared with 276 and eight cases of ru-bella compared with 17. Scarlet fever, however, showed an increase from 9 to 14. Number of cases of mumps re
